

Men Dating Tips - How To Attract Women

There are a few major principles to attracting women. Basically you want to seem like a really great guy that she would want to get to know.

Nov. 23, 2010 - PRLog -- Most women know whether they are attracted to you within two or three seconds. They'll give you an up-and-down appraisal that won't even notice, and it determines whether you get a second glance or even a conversation with her. So in order to pass this first test (and admit it, men do this with women too), try to present the best version of yourself.

If women dress to impress, then men should try to keep up. I'm not suggesting you suit up every day, but the appearance of good hygiene, a little style and a great smile go a long way. So, basically you want to look good, and if she gets close enough, you don't want to worry about whether you smell bad. Body odor or too much cologne will turn a woman off you in less time than it took for her to decide that you were good looking.

A second important principle of attracting women is your attitude and composure. Depending on how you view women, they may or may not want to hang out with you. The idea is moderation, you want to seem strong but non-threatening, smart without being pretentious, and that you like and appreciate women without objectifying them. No one likes to be seen as a piece of meat, and if your attitude reflects that, then you need to readjust your thought process. Keep a positive attitude, and let it reflect in the company you keep.

If you wouldn't date a girl because she has vapid friends who do nothing but gossip, then she won't be attracted to you if you keep friends around that are rude, start fights and don't know how to look a woman in the eye. Keep it low key, and if you're at a bar or club, bring along friends who are fun but won't embarrass you. This way, she won't feel intimidated by your group, but will feel free to be attracted and possibly even approach you.

A final piece of advice: don't ignore your shoes. Many women are able to judge what a man does, how he thinks of himself and a slew of other personality traits by your footwear alone. So unless you are doing a dirty job or trudging through snow, try to wear decent shoes so that she won't think poorly of you. I know it seems shallow, but it's a big world out there, and we all have ways to try to ensure that the person we are attracted to is someone we would be proud to walk down the street with.
