The high school announcement will tell people the graduate's name, the school and any interesting information regarding the ceremony. Graduation announcements are generally placed within an envelope that is addressed to the recipient.

Extra care and attention should be taken when addressing announcements. The envelope should be addressed by hand and no abbreviations should be used, other than titles such as "Mr.," and "Mrs.," Photo high school graduation invitations are addressed and mailed in basically the same manner. The only difference being that a ticket may be included, as these are actual invitations to the high school graduation ceremony. Because many high schools limit the number of guests per graduate, not everyone will be able to attend the graduation ceremony. That is why a graduation party is sometimes held after the ceremony so that friends

After receiving a high school graduation announcement, many people will send a gift to congratulate the graduate. If the graduate wants to avoid people feeling obligated to send a gift, this can be stated with a simple, "No gifts, please," within the announcement. If there is an open house party, people will more than likely bring gifts. Again, if the graduate feels this is unnecessary, they can state that on the graduation open house invitation. If gifts are received, it's imperative to send high school graduation thank you cards, whether or not they have indicated to send gifts.

There is certain etiquette when sending any printed high school graduation cards. These are announcing a huge event in the graduate's life and attention to detail is a must.
