When we think of a graduation party, the first thing that comes to mind are high school or college students finishing up that part of their academic careers. However, that's not the only ones who get to celebrate. Many parents today are also celebrating transitions after preschool and kindergarten for their children with a http://www.graduationcardsshop.com/kindergarten_preschool/cards/productlisting-5-31.htm Kindergarten Graduation celebration. If you're one of them, now is the time to start planning.

Graduation Invitations for Post-Toddlers

The first part of planning preschool <http://www.cardsshoppe.com/graduation-announcements/> Graduation Announcements or <http://www.express-invitations.com/graduation-announcements/kindergarten-preschool.php> preschool kindergarten graduation Invitations Cards are the guest list. If possible, invite your child's entire class. Leaving out one or two kids can be very hurtful. Now if there were serious problems between your child and the other student leaving him or her off the guest list might be a good idea. You can also invite other kids of around the same age who might live in your neighborhood or who were students in a different class if you desire. Family members can also be invited, especially if you need more adult supervision for the kids, but watching 20 or more 4 and 5 year olds playing isn't going to be great fun for everyone.

If you're going to be choosing <http://www.cardsshoppe.com/graduation-announcements/presc...> Preschool kindergarten graduation invitations, you definitely don't want to be boring. The good news is plenty of cards are available that are great choices for this age group. Of course, you also want to start collecting parents' contact information early on so you'll have it when it's time to start sending out the graduation party invitations. Make sure to have the RSVP phone number available or include a return card so guests can let you know if they will be attending or can ask questions about the event. Knowing who will be attending is important so you can make sure to have enough room and refreshments for everyone. Plus, it will give you a head's up on whether or not the parents will be sticking around.

Prior to Mailing the Preschool Graduation Cards

Obviously, you won't be able to mail those http://www.graduationcardsshop.com/kindergarten_preschool... preschool graduation cards until you've selected a location for the party. The park would be an excellent choice if it's nearby especially since the weather should be wonderful. Of course, you'll need more adult supervision this way. Make sure to let parents know in the preschool <http://www.express-invitations.com/graduation-announcements/> graduation announcement wording if any additional money will be needed for activities.

Another idea is to schedule the party at any of the businesses that specialize in these events, such as Chuck E. Cheese. You may want to call around for estimates before you decide on one of these locations. The nice thing for you is these locations handle all of the clean up, usually provide refreshments, and will keep the kids entertained. If you are going to one of these locations, make sure the kindergarten cards spell out the location, starting and ending times for the party, and what will be included in the party package. For example, if pizza will be served you don't want the guests to have already eaten lunch before arriving.

Finally, consider printing off some kindergarten certificates to pass out to each graduating student at the party as a way to celebrate their kindergarten graduation.
