

Swine Flu virus is your family protected

America's central repository for emergency contact information, is urging the general public to register themselves and their loved ones with NOKR's emergency contact system

April 27, 2009 - PRLog -- Washington, D.C. -- The Next of Kin Registry (NOKR), America's central repository for emergency contact information, is urging the general public to register themselves and their loved ones with NOKR's emergency contact system as the country works to halt the spread of the Swine Influenza A HINI virus infection.

Human cases of swine influenza continue to increase in the United States and internationally. To mitigate the potential upheaval of a pandemic, NOKR is issuing the following precautionary tips:

- ? Register your emergency point of contact / next of kin at NOKR: www.nokr.org.
- ? Create a free NOKR Registration Card.
- ? Store your NOKR registration card some place visible like your, Wallet, Purse, Backpack, Vehicle Glove Box or on the front of your Refrigerator.
- ? Make your information water / weather resistant by laminating.
- ? If possible list an instate and out of state point of contact for you or your family, example (brother, sister, mother, father, best friend, neighbor, attorney, etc.)
- ? If possible, list more than one person to be contacted if an urgent need arises.
- ? Make sure you have up to date contact information for your contact person(s).
- ? Medical power of attorney, establish who can make decisions for you when you cannot.
- ? Document your blood type, allergies, current medications and dosages, and current and previous medical conditions of each family member. Like much of the planning for a pandemic, this can also help prepare for other emergencies.
- ? Never travel locally, nationally or internationally with out the above information.
