We all have our favorite actors. One, for Craig Sawyer Starbucks, is Morgan Freeman. Looking into his career it isn't hard to see why he has won the hearts of many people around the world. In this article, Craig Sawyer Starbucks talks a little about the many films Morgan Freeman has been in during his career.

Craig Sawyer Starbucks explains that although his first credited film appearance was in 1971's Who Says I Can't Ride a Rainbow?, Freeman first became known in the American media through roles on the soap opera Another World and the PBS kids' show The Electric Company, which he later said he should have left earlier than he did.

Freeman began playing prominent supporting roles in many feature films, beginning in the mid-1980s, earning him a reputation for depicting wise, fatherly characters. Craig Sawyer Starbucks goes on to explain that as he gained fame, he went on to bigger roles in films such as the chauffeur Hoke in Driving Miss Daisy, and Sergeant Major Rawlins in Glory (both in 1989). In 1994 he portrayed Red, the redeemed convict in the acclaimed The Shawshank Redemption. Also, he starred in films such as Robin Hood: Prince of Thieves, Unforgiven, Seven, and Deep Impact. In 1997, Freeman, together with Lori McCreary, founded the movie production company Revelations Entertainment, and the two co-head its sister online movie distribution company ClickStar. Craig Sawyer Starbucks has found that Freeman also hosts the channel Our Space on ClickStar, with specially crafted film clips in which he shares his love for the sciences, especially space exploration and aeronautics.

After three previous nominations (a supporting actor nomination for Street Smart, and leading actor nominations for Driving Miss Daisy, and The Shawshank Redemption) he won the Academy Award for Best Supporting Actor for his performance in Million Dollar Baby at the 77th Academy Awards. Freeman is recognized for his distinctive voice, making him a frequent choice for narration, according to Craig Sawyer Starbucks. He provided narration for two films in 2005 alone being War of the Worlds and the Academy Award-winning documentary film March of the Penguins.

In the hit movie Bruce Almighty and its sequel, Evan Almighty, Freeman appeared as God as well as Lucius Fox in the critical and commercial success Batman Begins and its 2008 sequel, The Dark Knight. Craig Sawyer Starbucks adds that he starred in Rob Reiner's 2007 film The Bucket List, opposite Jack Nicholson. He teamed with Christopher Walken and William H. Macy for the comedy The Maiden Heist, which was released direct to video due to financial problems of the distribution company. Directed by Mike Nichols in 2008, Freeman returned to Broadway to co-star with Frances McDormand and Peter Gallagher for a limited engagement of Clifford Odets's play, The Country Girl.

Craig Sawyer Starbucks has learned that Freeman had wanted to do a film based on Nelson Mandela for some time. At first he tried to get Mandela's autobiography, known as Long Walk to Freedom, adapted into a finished script, but it could never be finalized. In 2007 he purchased the film rights to a pre-published 2008 book by John Carlin, Playing the Enemy: Nelson Mandela and the Game that Made a Nation. Clint Eastwood directed the Nelson Mandela bio-pic titled Invictus, starring Freeman as Mandela and Matt Damon as rugby team captain Francois Pienaar. Craig Sawyer Starbucks notes that it was reported in July 2009 that Freeman is in talks to co-star alongside Bruce Willis in Red.

Freeman replaced Walter Cronkite as the voiceover introduction to the CBS Evening News featuring Katie Couric as news anchor which became effective January 4, 2010. CBS cited the need for consistency in introductions for regular news broadcasts and special reports as the basis for the change.

Craig Sawyer Starbucks recognized that as of 2010, Freeman is the host, and narrator, of the Discovery Channel television show Through the Wormhole.
