

High Conflict Institute and EVDense Corporation Announce Preferred Partner Relationship

The formula for dealing with high conflict personalities in a child custody disputes

Jan. 6, 2011 - PRLog -- Seattle, WA – High Conflict Institute LLC

(<http://www.highconflictinstitute.com>), providers of education and resources to understand people who have High Conflict personalities, is partnering with EVDense Corporation (<https://www.evdense.com>), maker of EVDense Digital Diary. High Conflict Institute is pleased to recommend EVDense Digital Diary – Child Custody to parents involved in Child Custody disputes with a borderline or narcissistic spouse.

In general, High Conflict People (HCPs) are most difficult because they become preoccupied with a target of blame, and in Child Custody cases, the target may quickly become the soon-to-be-ex spouse. High Conflict Institute teaches the targets of blame, and the professionals helping them, how to collect information to support an assertive approach to successfully manage HCPs in Child Custody cases.

Technology advancements over the last decade have created a new problem: how to handle the overwhelming amount of electronic evidence. Today, family law disputes include more than just testimony and paper documents. In fact, a huge amount of evidence is contained in emails, text messages, voicemails, and postings on Facebook, MySpace and Twitter. It is almost impossible to use traditional methods of collecting facts to keep up with the fast-growing numbers of emails and other electronic evidence. EVDense Digital Diary – Child Custody is the first online diary to help anyone store emails, pictures, voicemails, text messages and any other electronic file, and organize them in a visual timeline. With EVDense, a parent can easily store electronic files from the parent suffering from a personality disorder, and more importantly can use the EVDense visual timeline to show patterns of aggressive behavior and distorted claims.

“Lawyers know that pictures are worth thousands of words when telling their story,” says Bill Eddy, Co-Founder of High Conflict Institute and a family law attorney. “As I’ve lectured and written, a timeline is the most effective tool to show the behavior patterns of a parent with a personality disorder. The EVDense visual timeline is a breakthrough, because it takes a large amount of evidence and shows patterns in a simple, easy to see picture.”

“EVDense Digital Diary – Child Custody is the perfect compliment to our education services and resource materials for dealing with HCPs,” says Megan Hunter, Co-Founder of High Conflict Institute. “Now we can recommend to our clients a concrete solution that puts our training and resources into action.”

Sign up for your EVDense Digital Diary – Child Custody account today at https://www.evdense.com/child_custody to keep records and collect the evidence you need to protect yourself. Don’t allow persuasive blamers to take advantage of you by distorting the facts and doing anything they can to “win” the case against you. Ultimately, using these tools reduce the negative impact that custody battles have on children.
