

Terry Sacka Explains How European Bank Derivatives and Bail-Ins Affect Your Buying Power

Dr. Charles Vance interviewed Terry Sacka, Chief Strategist of Cornerstone Asset Metals, to discuss how the activities of big banks, the risk of defaults on derivatives and the events in Europe are affecting the buying power of the American dollar and the future of the American standard of living.

JUPITER, Fla. - Jan. 6, 2017 - PRLog -- Mr. Sacka opened by saying, "Europe, America, these financial derivatives and the IMF Reserve with the Petrodollar are so connected that our standard living, our peace of mind, future, ability to buy and our retirement are all in jeopardy."

He went on to say, "Many people don't think we have inflation. The fact is - everything is infinitely more expensive since 9/11. But since then, those in silver are financially wealthier and maintaining their ability to buy."

Mr. Sacka also provided visual graphics to explain the risks that big banks take with the danger of defaults on derivatives, explaining that a derivative is just something that derives its value from something else (it's just paper business) and relating this to the mortgage collapse in 2008.

Silver- & Gold-Backed IRAs

Gold and silver is the best performing asset class in the last ten years. The nice part about a precious metals IRA - there actually is a physical metal purchased and stored on your behalf. Gold is capable of going back to its high, yielding a 60% return and silver a 200% return. Gold and silver are really the wealth transfer in the physical market.
