"During the winter, we tend to stay indoors and not exercise as much. When we start back in with physical activity, our muscles are tight increasing the risk of an injury. A massage loosens up your muscles, so you are not as likely to get hurt," says Michael Greenspan, massage expert at Massage Revolution, Manhattan Beach, a small beach town in Los Angeles, California.

Massages are also great for getting you ready for your workout routine. They improve circulation and boost oxygen levels in the blood. They deliver nutrients throughout the body, so you have the energy you need to perform at your best.

A massage can also be great after you are done working out. It reduces stiffness and swelling related to back pain, neck pain, and knee pain, so you feel better after your workout routine. It gets you ready to get back in the game.

Massages are also beneficial in the spring because they reduce allergy symptoms.

Studies show that allergy symptoms are directly related to stress. If you are exposed to high levels of histamines while experiencing stress, it can worsen your allergic reaction.

Massages decrease stress levels and improve your circulation and your immunity. This makes them beneficial in reducing allergies that often occur during the spring season.

Massage Revolution is a recommended destination for your spring massage. Our massage in Manhattan Beach services offer neuromuscular massage therapy, trigger point massage therapy, and other treatments that will get you in shape for the spring.
